UNHCR's voluntary refusals (VRFs) are individuals who voluntarily return to their country of origin in a situation of their own choice. UNHCR, the UN High Commissioner for Refugees, confirms that these individuals are not refugees and do not have refugee status.

Humanity & Inclusion (HI) notes that the voluntary return of refugees (VRFs) represents an important step towards reducing the backlog of cases that remain pending.

UNHCR-RTG is a process that allows refugees to express their desire to return voluntarily to their country of origin. UNHCR confirms that the voluntary return of refugees (VRFs) is a step towards reducing the backlog of cases that remain pending.