The Government of Germany and UNHCR started the Albert Einstein German Academic Refugee Initiative (DAFI program) in 1992. Today, the German Government remains the largest donor to the program.

Over the past 30 years the program enabled access to tertiary education to 18.000 refugees in over 50 countries around the world. DAFI program is model for building resilience, self-reliance and expanding solutions for refugees and communities.

DAFI plays a key role in buffering the interruption of individual educational pathways, opening prospects for refugee youth and ensuring that their rights and protection needs are respected.
